Neil was born in Edinburgh and trained at the Bristol Old Vic Theatre School. He has been designing and delivering engaging and dynamic training solutions for businesses in the UK and Europe for twelve years including programmes in: Leadership Development, Emerging Leaders, Influence and Persuasion, Presence & Impact and Presenting with Gravitas for Directors, Senior and Middle Managers.

Neil is currently a Partner at Frank Partners with Anna Carus-Wilson. Prior to that, he was a Partner with Barking Productions, a highly successful training company which consistently produced excellent results and a lot of repeat business with a wide range of companies. During this time, he also did over 250 comedy improvisation performances with 'Instant Wit.'

Neil is a first rate facilitator with groups of all sizes. His style is energetic, warm, engaging and thoughtful. He uses humour to good effect, is a good listener and is not afraid to challenge where appropriate.

The clients he has worked with recently have included:

- News International
- EDF
- QinetiQ
- Pentland Brands
- European Space Agency
- Christie's

Neil's qualifications include:

- Diploma in Drama and Acting, Bristol Old Vic Theatre School
- Certificate of Competence in Occupational Testing (Level A and B) – British Psychological Society
- Myers Briggs Type Indicator (Oxford Psychologists Press)
- Firo Foundations (Team Focus)
- Transactional Analysis 101 (Institute of Transactional Analysis)

Neil was a successful actor for ten years, during which time he worked in theatre, television, commercials, voice-overs, corporate videos and film. He still works as an actor when he can fit it in around his commitments with Frank Partners.

He lives in Bristol with his wife and two teenage sons. In his spare time, he enjoys singing, running (10k and half marathon), walking, theatre, film, books and travel.
